FUSION FLAVOURS

Welcome to Fusion Flavours, a digital cookbook created for students who want to explore the world through food.

We understand some of the common challenges students face, including limited time, budget constraints, and little previous cooking experience. For this reason, we curated a collection of accessible recipes designed to introduce readers to dishes and food traditions from different cultures.

The cookbook includes traditional recipes, vegetarian alternatives, and fusion dishes that combine elements from more than one cuisine. Each section is intended to encourage cultural exploration while giving students practical ideas for preparing meals at home.

The recipes and cultural information were researched and compiled for an academic project. They were not formally tested by the project team, so readers should use their judgment and follow appropriate food-safety practices while cooking.

We believe food can encourage cultural exchange, curiosity, and connection. We hope this cookbook inspires readers to explore new flavours and learn more about the stories behind different cuisines.

Happy cooking!

Bibimbap (South Korea)

A classic Korean dish that blends rice, vegetables, meat, and a fried egg with gochujang (chili paste), symbolizing balance and harmony in Korean culture, with each ingredient representing different parts of the human body.

Thank You

Thank you for exploring Fusion Flavours: A Recipe Book for Cultural Exploration.

We hope this cookbook introduced you to new dishes, cultural traditions, and creative ways of combining flavours from around the world. As part of the original academic project, the cookbook was shared with classmates and evaluated through a Google Forms survey. Feedback was collected from 22 respondents and was used to assess the cookbook's cultural content, design, clarity, and overall reader experience.

An anonymized summary of the feedback is included separately in the project portfolio.

Happy cooking!
